Higher Prices for American Stocks From London-President Roose. velt's Sintement and the End of the Steel Strike Payorable Factors.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 .- On the resumption of business this morning the deal ings in the stock market were plainly governed by several controlling influences Beyond question the most important was the brief statement made by Mr. Roosewelt just before formally taking the oath of office as President-his simple and loyal declaration that his aim and policy as President would be to continue abso-lutely unbroken the policy of President

All day this declaration was the main subject of conversation wherever men gathered to discuss the financial situation and outlook. The country has now been told what it can count upon in the ad-ministration of public affairs and the country knows that it can rely absolutely upon the word and the performance of its new Chief Magistrate. Probably next in order in point of importance to Mr. Roosevelt's utterances was the announcement, late on Saturday afternoon, of a final settlement of the protracted strike of the Amalgamated Association, which has now been in progress for over two Wis Central 50 49 49 49 49 49 49 494 494

When this announcement was first made its significance was overskadowed by the interest taken in the situation at Ruffalo, but today its importance was clearly realized. Then again, the very extensive advances which were scored in American stocks in London, prior to the opening of the local board, naturally played a decided part in shaping senti-These advances extended from 1 to 4 points throughout the American quarter and the dealings in American stocks were reported as being on a more animated scale than for a long time.

very extensive advances should have been made right at the opening, but it was particularly noteworthy that these were exceedingly well retained, and in a large number of cases materially bettered with the course of the session. Technically considered, there was an active borrowing demand for stocks and an excellent enquiry from commission houses, while supporting orders were evident throughout the market. There seemed, however, to be little occasion for the introduction of the latter, as the short interest proceeded from the opening precipitately to reduce its commission houses had elected to close out their customers stocks during hast weeks unsettled conditions, and at all events many close observers of the dealings thought they detected counter transactions in today's dealings. Inasmuch as the trading at large was governed by commercial influences and the market moved with more or less uniformity, it would appear hardly necessary to particularize regarding special movements.

They were followed up also by exceedingly heavy purchases here for foreign account and the latter would doubtless have been in still greater volume but for the rapidity of the advance in the local market.

Still another encouraging influence was Saturday's bank statement, which showed the first considerable reduction in the local account in a fortnight. There was little change in sterling exchange conditions, and the remainder of the day's routine was made up of the large traffic returns submitted for various periods.

The usual monthly statement of the country's foreign trade for August showed.

The causes of this unusual buoyancy.

The causes of this unusual buoyancy.

The usual monthly statement of the country's foreign trade for August showed an excess of exports of merchandise amounting to £34,500,000 against $41,700,000 for the corresponding month of last year.

Merchandise imports increased about $10,000,000, while exports increased less than $4,600,000.

In view of the general circumstances under which the market opened it was not remarkable that a large number of very extensive advances should have been made right at the opening, but it was particularly noteworthy that these were exceedingly well retained, and in a large number of cases materially bettered with the course of the session. Technically considered, there was an active borrowing demand for stocks and an excellent enquiry from commission houses, while supporting orders were evident throughout the market. There seemed, however, to be little occasion for the introduction of the latter, as the short interest proceeded from the opening precipitately to reduce its commitments.

It was apparently the case also that a number of commission houses had elected to close out their customers stocks during hast week's unsettled conditions, and at all events many close observers of the dealings thought they detected counter transactions in today's dealings. Innament of the strading at large was governed by commercial influences and the market moved with more or less uniform ity, it would appear hardly necessary to particularize regarding special movements.

The railway 8st furnished the bulk of The attitude of the clearing house is also called the order of the strating house is also called the color of the strating of the attitude of the clearing house is also called the order of the strating of the street administration will not be changed in any important particular. The ending of the street, but nevertheless the actual accomplishment of harmony between the steel workers and their employers, the Steel Trust, was a static particular transactions in today's dealings. Innament of the street was the trading at large was gove act at a moments notice. A prominent member of the Clearing House Committee westerday outlined the general policy lows:

There has not been the slightest evidence or suggestion of weakness in an emergency as lower of the committee with the committee with seven the control of the committee with seven the control of the committee with seven certification to home certificates. The Clearing House Committee will issue certification that had securities to put up will obtain a seven the normal securities to put up will no bank that had securities to put up will not be the control of the committee with seven that had securities to put up will should be pressed we will assist it, but as it said before, the issue of clearing house certificates will be recreted to only as an improbable remote contingency of all the banks being pushed for cash.

It was thought yesterday that some reaction from the high price level established might be seen later this week, but the street was full of condidence that in the near future. Some people even talk of an early revised of the control of the control in the near future. Some people even talk of an early revised of the control of the present week but for not only for the present week but for not only for the present week but for the control of the co max and is on its wane.

The grangers and the Pacific securities were the features of the session. During the entire session they were buoyant in the extreme and they closed at the highest prices of the day with gains of from 3 to 5 points from the close of last Friday. St. Paul, despite the moinentary disappointment fell last week ever the failure of the company to increase its dividend was perhaps the strongest of the group with an advance to above 161. The Atchisons also were very strong, the common getting to 76 and closing at the top. The reasons for this buoyancy are clear. The prosperity of these systems has been phenomenal and the great community of interest plan was built by the greatest railway and financial men in the world for the purpose of perpetuating this prosperity.

The Steel securities were both very strong under the stimulus of the ending of the strike and the belief held by many careful people that the company will continue its dividend on the common despite the losses of the past three months. The support of the Keene clique, of course, contributed to the buoyancy of the stocks.

The coal securities were all buoyant, the Erica especially showing excellent.

Government officials have a way of their own with inventors. That way is to leave them and their inventions alone. It is a curious conservatism, which at one time was thought to be exemplified in head and front by the War Office. It is, however, the admiralty's turn. That office is coming into the blazing light of publicity after years of peace undisturbed by public interest. The latter quantity, surfeited by War Office mismanagement, is asking itself if the admiralty is any better placed. This is a question which the sea lords will answer question which the sea lords will answer when the great pinch comes. Meanwhile that go-shend Journal "Patents" finds cause for quarrel with them for stuitify-ing the efforts of British inventors. Praccause for quarrel with them for stultifying the efforts of British inventors. Practically it is impossible, says that journal, to get an invention looked at by the admiralty, because it is no one's business to bother about inventions.

A case of the most glaring foolhardiness, says "Patents," he cope to their knowledge, in which a submarine inventor was humbugged and smibbed over a course of four months, when, feeling tired, he laid his invention before the American Ambassador, with the result that in a short space of time his invention was taken up for serious consideration by the United States Navy.

We know of another submarine inventor—Howard—who, despite Admiral Pearson's favorable report, cannot get a trial. With the War Office it is the same. No inventor can get a test because it is no one's business to worry, and the Government supports this scandalous way of treating the inventions of a nation which has revolutionized half the things in the world.

The protest of "Patents" is well timed, and the question of a bureau for inventions and the revision of the absuribles of our Patent Office and laws should receive the very earnest attention of ministers. It should be a department of the suggested Ministry of Commerce to deal with inventions, for business men everywhere say that the commercialism of the nation is suffering from the apathy of successive Governments, which have accepted the commercial supremacy of this country as a thing which does not need backing and sustaining by other than individual effort.—London Express.

A Friend of the Plain People. The number of good stories that are floating about Forfarshire in connection with the late Provost Fyfe are legion One day, when he was only a ballie, he was on the bench of the Burgh Police Court. The first case called was that of an old woman, who toddied into court with the utmost unconcern "Weel, Janie," said the ballie, "fat's brucht ye here."

Officer of Court—Please, yer Honor, she was caught stealing wood from Balmashanner plantation.

Baille—That belangs to the toon, disn't it." One day, when he was only a bailie, he Officer of Court—Yes, your Honor.

Bailie—Then things has come to an awful pass if we canna tak' a backfu' o' sticks frae our ain plantins. Gae 'wa wi' ye, man; are ye no ashamed of yersel'?

And Janet, ma wumman, whenever ye want ony mair sticks, just gang the same gait and get them. Fat's the warid comin' tae?—Scottish-American.
